

Newsletter – Fixed Income Markets

Within a few weeks, the COVID-19 epidemic caused a shock of unprecedented violence in the fixed income markets. In fact, risk premiums, particularly in the high yield segment, reached in record time a level not seen since the great financial crisis of 2008. High yield spreads widened by 550 basis points (bp), reaching a level close to 900 bp at the peak of the market on 18 March.

At the peak of volatility, the fixed income market dislocated. Three examples can illustrate this:

- Short bonds, regardless of their quality, had become impossible to sell, reflecting massive redemptions from short bond funds to arbitrage on other asset classes.
- The credit curves of high-yield issuers reversed significantly, indicating extreme stress on their ability to refinance. The market began to value the High Yield segment in view of the probability of default.
- Sovereign debt has not been used as a safe haven. The issue was to generate liquidity at all costs through the few assets available and without capital losses. As a result, the strongest sovereign securities were sold, and rates rose.

In order to reduce the shock wave, Central banks have announced exceptional measures. The Fed very quickly reduced its key rate to 0.25% in March by making two successive cuts of 50 and then 100 bp. The institution accompanied this decision with an almost unlimited asset purchase plan, including credit bonds for the first time.

The ECB also reacted strongly by launching an emergency pandemic procurement programme of €750bn until the end of the year. This comes on top of the €120bn announced earlier this month and the €20 billion per month programme resumed last November.

The States also unveiled major plans to support the economy. This is notable in Europe where lessons on governance seem to have been learned from previous crises, but the issue of the health dimension remains unpredictable, particularly regarding the development in the United States.

Impacts on our management

As far as R-Co Conviction Credit Euro is concerned, while we were patient at first, we then started to invest. We removed the fund's hedges and bought bonds very selectively through a few high-yield securities that had been particularly affected by the situation but for which we have strong convictions.

We are currently taking advantage of opportunities in the Investment Grade segment, notably through the reopening of the primary market where high-quality companies are refinancing with very attractive issue premiums. Airbus, rated A2/A+, for example, issued a 5-year bond with a yield of 1.72% on March 31. Such a bond had a negative yield before the crisis.

Finally, the last point to emphasize is that we try to keep a liquidity pocket in the portfolio so that we do not have to sold in unfavourable conditions, when participants tend, in times of high volatility, to withdraw from the market. Indeed, liquidity has been particularly affected by the crisis we are currently experiencing, and it is often difficult to sell bonds under good conditions. We are convinced that this extreme volatility is a source of opportunities, but we continue to analyse the situation with caution.

The figures on UCIs provided in this document relate to previous months or years and past performance is not a reliable indicator of future performance. Performance is not constant over time. The value of the investments and the income derived therefrom may vary up or down and is not guaranteed. It is therefore possible that you will not recover the amount originally invested. Variations in exchange rates may increase or decrease the value of the investments and the income derived therefrom, if the reference currency of the UCI is different from the currency of your country of residence. UCIs whose investment policy especially targets specialised markets or sectors (like emerging markets) are generally more volatile than more general and balanced funds. For a volatile UCI, the fluctuations can be particularly significant, and the value of the investment may therefore drop sharply and significantly. The presented performance figures do not take into account.
